

SELF-SLAIN.

A sad case in Ireland with mysterious surroundings. DUBLIN, Nov. 10.—The news of what appears to be a sensational suicide or possible murder, involving an American family, has been received from Naas, County Kildare, nine miles southwest of this city. The seat of Lord Glenoury is situated near Naas. The mansion is situated on extensive grounds and one of the beauties of the place is quite an extensive lake. To-day while some of the keepers were walking along the shores of the lake they saw something in the water which attracted their attention, and proceeded to investigate. It was the body of the object, which proved to be a woman, ashore. Her consternation may be imagined; but it was only natural to assume, in view of the circumstances, that it was the body of the Hon. Rose Lawless, youngest sister of Lord Glenoury. The finding of the body and the remains were tenderly removed to the house of the deceased, where the body was laid out. No information has been received, and it is a matter of conjecture as to how the unfortunate lady met her death.

GROUNDED WIRES.

The rain interfered with Telegraph and Telephone wires.

For twenty-four hours the telephone service has been seriously interrupted; excessively wet weather is always likely to do this. The chief of the wires—last night the telephone company had 700 to 800 wires down and otherwise incapacitated; those were chiefly in the residence region and the trouble is attributed to the proximity of the water, will be soon corrected between two closely contiguous wires, and "grounding" them. This is not only about fifty wires were out of order.

The fire alarm telegraph system experienced no trouble worth mentioning. The telephone wire to the Chain of Rocks came in contact with an electric light wire and was burned up. Nothing else of consequence was reported.

HORACE BOIES is 64 years old, but he has a youthful charm for the young Democracy.

It is just as definitely settled now that the Baltimore was not blown up as that PEAT EGAN ought to be.

The man who will do his duty most honestly and fearlessly is the man needed at the head of the School Board.

The Globe-Democrat says that RUSSELL'S victory was a personal and not a partisan triumph. Was QUAY'S victory personal or partisan?

AS PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, Mr. HARRISON is glad that QUAY was vindicated in Pennsylvania. It would be interesting to hear his views as an elder in the church.

SENATOR SHERMAN expressed his desire rather than his opinion when he declared that silver would be the issue in 1892. He and all other sensible Republicans realize the danger to the party in making the McKinley law an issue.

SENATOR HISCOCK is a stupid man, but he would make a better Secretary of War than the intellectual Mr. ELKINS. The duties of the office in time of peace are of the sort which a vascular clamp can well perform.

The report of the Examining Committee of the School Board not only corroborates the evidence of the Prince of Wales' crookedness published by the Post-DISPATCH, but suggests the desirability of an investigating committee.

In the Lord Mayor's parade yesterday were several allegorical can emblematical of incidents in the life of the Prince of Wales. It is suspected that many incidents of his life are unfit for publication, except in allegorical form.

THE organization of the School Board should be made in a way which will most surely smash old combinations, cut all crooked entanglements, abolish a lusty protector of American labor, is an iron manufacturer in Pittsburgh. He cut the wages of his wards last week—after election—and now they want to know what makes the rate of wages.

JERRY SIMPSON's was the only county in Kansas in which the full Alliance ticket was pulled through. And JERRY is the only man of first-rate ability in that curious organization of cranks.

MUCH of the pathos of the rejected servant of kings which SHAKESPEARE put so eloquently into the mouth of Cardinal WOLSEY is found in the condition of BISMARCK at present. Deprived of office, shorn of power, humiliated by the grandson of the master to whose service he gave his life, the aged ex-Chancellor finds himself hampered and cowed in his attempts to defend himself and vindicate his course by the grandson's use of the power he built up for the grandfather.

IN THE HANDS OF CONGRESS.

Congress will assemble in a few weeks with the largest anti-administration majority in the House that has ever confronted a President of the United States. For the first time in the history of the Republic our President has seen the very states that gave him their electoral votes choose a majority of Congressmen pledged to oppose the policy and measures by which he expected to secure his re-election. His force bill, his tariff scheme, his silver policy and his civil service methods were condemned in the lump last fall by the largest popular majorities ever recorded against a party in power.

Ordinarily there is danger that a House elected in such a tempest of popular opposition may be a little too impetuous. But a year has intervened between the election and the organization of this House. In the meantime the administration has modified its policy in some respects and another November election has shown the effect of this modification on the popular mind. It has shown that even with the force bill eliminated as an issue; with all that the reciprocity modification, assisted by unprecedented crops at home and an exceptional demand for them abroad, can do to offset the burdens of that tariff, the verdict pronounced by Iowa, New York and Massachusetts last fall is reiterated by them after a year's further observation and discussion of the matter.

That is to say, three of the five States which were relied on this fall to reverse last fall's condemnation of the administration they all voted to put in power, have again emphasized their dissatisfaction with administration and its measures.

With this fresh expression of the popular will to guide it, the new House should see its best course very plainly marked out for it. The popular mandate, easily interpreted, is that the opposition so signalized by approved by the people shall be kept up vigorously till the more odious features of the tariff are surrendered, as the force bill was, and till further reciprocity modifications are conceded. Our blundering diplomacy with reference to Spanish America must be unsparingly investigated, pension irregularities corrected, and civil service degradation exposed.

These are issues on which there is no division in the ranks of the opposition. Iowa is as solid on them as New York, and the reforms to be secured by union on these issues should not be endangered by giving precedence to side issues on which neither party is solid. The present Congress cannot enact free coinage over the President's veto, and the attempt to do it would only force the party to sectionally divide and weaken the opposition to the party in power. If this Congress is equally powerless to secure the immediate and total reversal of the trust tariff, it can at least secure further modifications, and an issue on which a united and invincible opposition will next year elect an anti-plutocratic government.

The most ardent silver man ought to see that Mr. MILLIS was a wise and true friend of free coinage when he suggested the project to the incoming Congress.

It is just as definitely settled now that the Baltimore was not blown up as that PEAT EGAN ought to be.

The man who will do his duty most honestly and fearlessly is the man needed at the head of the School Board.

Kansas City Journal Interview With E. B. Ewing of the Jefferson City Tribune.

"Gov. Francis has not announced his intention respecting an extension of the General Assembly, though I think it is understood that he will call an extra session. This course would inspire the statement being freely made that Francis is actuated in this matter, not by any consideration of party or public good, but by a desire to further his own selfish purposes. Understand me, I do not think Francis is a candidate for Congress-at-large, he is too small for that. The Main Issue in the School Board Re-organization.

THE HOLD-OVER MEMBERS WANT BARTHOLD FOR PRESIDENT.

The Race Between Hickman and Barthold, Though McClain Still Has His Supporters—The New Board to Elect Officers This Evening—Friends of the Candidates Hard at Work.

Members of the School Board have been busy all day canvassing the situation so far as the presidency is concerned, as the organization takes place at 5 o'clock to-night. By 9 o'clock it is expected President Miller's successor will be duly installed and the new organization ready for the transaction of business. Both the supporters of Hickman and Barthold were claiming the lead this afternoon. Mr. McClain and his supporters, despite his declaration that he did not want the presidency if my combination had to be organized to give it to him. He has refused to attend any conference or ask any member to support him.

Director Barthold has the active support of such hold-over members as Macklin, Trull, McEntire, Cudmore, and it is claimed he will get the support of Kelly, Mathews and Brady, as well as some of the new members. The supporters of Hickman, headed by Directors Holthaus and Dr. Wait, insist that they come to a vote the supporters of Mr. McClain will reluctantly go into line and for the Seventh District member. Barthold's backers are emphatic in their declaration that he ought to be awarded to a hold-over member.

MUST SUPPORT HER.

An Interesting Decision in a Suit for Maintenance.

THIRTEEN OPINIONS HANDED DOWN BY THE COURT OF APPEALS.

T. P. Spangler Will Have to Contribute to His Wife's Support—A Decision Which Establishes a Precedent—Mechanics Mantel & Co. Trouble Settled—General Court News.

The Court of Appeals handed down thirteen opinions to-day among them decisions in some important cases. The most prominent among these is the ruling in the case of Alton Spangler against Kaufman & Wilkinson, garnishes of L. P. Spangler. The case has been in court for several years and beyond the precedent it established has solved many difficulties. One of which has been a series of branches, one of which has been to the Court of Appeals before, but the ruling on that occasion was of such a nature that further hearing was necessary in the Circuit Court before a final decision could be reached.

Mrs. Emily Parker, widow of T. P. Spangler, is the wife of defendant, Louis P. Spangler. The couple are separated, but not divorced. Spangler is a bookkeeper in the employ of Wilkinson, number merchants. The Spanglers' married life was of short duration, they having been married in October, 1887, and separated in January, 1888. They had a suit for maintenance, and on Dec. 15, 1888, got a judgment. Spangler was then employed as bookkeeper for Eugene Donzey, one of the partners in the firm, and his work for Kaufman & Wilkinson. His wife filed another garnishee suit for support. Spangler, however, has been represented in all the litigation by Attorney Fort in the Circuit Court every term of court since April, 1888.

The first case that came up for trial under the new opinion was on Oct. 10, the October term of 1888, in Judge Klein's court. Spangler's attorney set up the additional defense that he was off duty and could not be garnished. Judge Klein sustained this position and decided against the wife. She appealed to the Circuit Court holding that the head of a household was free from garnishment against a stranger, but not against himself. The case was, therefore, sent back for another trial.

Before the case was rescheduled, Judge Klein set up a new suit for damages. Mrs. Spangler and assigned to Judge Withrow's court cause up for trial, and it was agreed that the amount of damages to be obtained before trying any of the other cases.

The theory was advanced that the agent was being paid a view of preventing Mrs. Spangler from getting at her husband's money, and that she was expected and Schaefer, a fresh young German, gave his testimony. Judge Valant held the trial, and after hearing Schaefer's story and laid the case over until to-morrow to give him time to procure more evidence as to how he treated his wife.

Other Suits on Trial.

The suit of Augusta C. Stipek, wife of Dr. J. R. Stipek, against the Hartford Life and Accident Insurance Co. for $10,000 on her husband's life, which was begun yesterday in Judge Dillen's court and laid over, was re-sumed to-day.

In Judge Withrow's court to-day the suit of Proctor Mahoney is in progress. Reeder sued for damages which he sustained by being run over by a horse belonging to Mr. Spangler.

Probate Matters.

The will of Clinton Anderson was admitted to probate to-day. He gives his estate, consisting of several city lots, to his wife Amanda.

Leopold Frank, administrator de bonis testam., was appointed to settle the estate of Richard H. Weightman, qualified to act in the Probate Court. The remaining estate is valued at $10,000.

Court Notes.

A judgment for $80,75 for the plaintiff was granted in Judge Klein's court to-day in the case of Mrs. H. Hinckman and others against E. C. Alderson, defendant. The suit was for $10,000 damages.

With regard to the proposition that Spangler, having himself and his mother and sister to support the Court held that it is a moral obligation on him to support his mother and sister, but that it is a moral and legal obligation on him to support his wife, and hence her claim comes first.

OPEN CASE REVERSED.

Another case reversed was on the Court of Appeals to-day was the Owen divorce case. This case was tried in Judge Valant's court to-day, and the record of it appearing in the Post-Dispatch at the time. Oliver Owen, aged 66, brought suit against his wife, Anna Maittow, for divorce to-day against Elizabeth Weightman. They were married April 9, 1877, in Clarence, N. Y., and separated in September, 1884. He drinks drunkenly.

The jury in the case of William Adair and Edward A. Lovry, against Horatio G. Jr., and others, in which Mrs. Owen-Maittow brought a claim against two blocks of ground adjoining Tower Grove Park, gave a verdict in favor of the plaintiff to the sum of $10,000.

John L. Miller filed suit against Charles A. Goss, for the sum of $10,000 damages, last afternoon for $10,000 damages. May's alibi that Gittelch charged him with embezzlement was not believed, and he was acquitted. He was arrested and held to await the Grand Jury. When the master was called, he said "I know the charge, but thinks he was damaged by the practice of the charge to the extent of the above amount."
